

Frankfurt am Main, Germany

September 13-17 & 20-24, 2010

For the fifth time, the Louisville Microsurgery Teaching Course will be held in Europe.

Students will be instructed on essential microsurgical technique with:

- Hands-on instruction and practice in live animal vessels.
- One-on-one instruction from an experienced microsurgeon.
- Only maximum 5 students per 5-day course.
- Videotape assisted instruction and take-home course instruction handbook.
- The latest Zeiss OPMI Vario/S 88 and the unique OPMI® Pentero™ clinical operating microscopes and S&T microsurgical instruments.
- A take-home video recording and photographs of you performing key anastomoses for later review.
- Certificate verifying the completion of the course.
- The course is Credited 50 CME Points.

What:

Where:

Johann Wolfgang Goethe University, Dept. of Trauma & Orthopedic Surgery, Frankfurt am Main, Germany.

When:

Two five-day courses held on September 13-17 & 20-24, 2010.

Whom:

For beginners in microsurgery as well as experienced microsurgeons wanting to strengthen or upgrade their skills.

Cost:

Before 6/30/2010: 1,200 Euros                      Before 7/31/2010: 1,300 Euros
Before 8/30/2010: 1,400 Euros
Includes animals, sutures, misc. supplies, course hand book, video recording and photographs, and catering during the course.

How:

Email (gustavo@louisville.edu), Call (1-502-852-6229), Toll Free (1-800-334-8635, ext 852-6229), or Fax (1-502-852-6239) Dr. Gustavo Perez-Abadia at the University of Louisville with inquires or to reserve a place.

Space is extremely limited (5 students per 5-day course) and will be given on a first-come-first-serve basis.

